INTRODUCTION

HISTORY OF UNIFORM CRIME REPORTING

The need to gather and analyze crime statistics in this country dates back to 1870. During this time Congress sought to provide a national system of crime reporting, but their efforts failed. In 1871 the National Police Association attempted to collect crime data, but with equal lack of success.

It was not until 1927 that a Uniform Records Committee was established by the International Association of Chiefs of Police. This committee developed a uniform classification for most parts of the country. This classification was based directly upon the system employed by the Bureau of Census in compiling statistics of prisoners.

During the later part of 1930, the program was turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The Bureau began receiving on a voluntary basis crime statistics from police agencies throughout the United States. Since those early times, the Bureau has published many distinguished reports using those statistics. In recent years, the Bureau has actively assisted individual states in developing their own statewide programs.

INTENT OF THE SYSTEM

The intent of the New Mexico Uniform Crime Reporting (NMUCR) Program shall be to supply local community agencies, institutions and organizations with a source of crime statistics which they can use to assist in management decisions and implementing planning strategies to deter, reduce and prevent crime.

ASSUMPTIONS AND LIMITATIONS OF THE PUBLICATION

Unfortunately, we cannot state that all police agencies within New Mexico accurately record and submit crime data to NMUCR; however, the statistics listed in this publication are based on the most accurate data currently available. Accompanying this current data are many assumptions and limitations which directly affect the accuracy and precision of the statistics within this publication. These assumptions and limitations also directly affect the summarizing and the comparing of local community crime statistics. These are being noted for the reader who endeavors to draw conclusions concerning the statistical data.

The following factors are the major aspects which have an influence on the statistics presented in this publication:

ASSUMPTION

1. Crime is a social problem in New Mexico.

2. Crime figures presented in this publication are police statistics as distinguished from judicial or penal statistics.

3. Actual crimes represent violations of New Mexico statutes and local ordinances.

4. Citizen apathy and indifference contribute to the spread of crime.

5. Community institutions and organizations, coupled with police agencies are influenced by the decline and/or rise in crime rates.

6. A high level of integrity is needed in order to state NMUCR index crime rates.

7. Some police agencies have a profound distrust of the practical value of a statistical collection of data.

8. It is significant to consider the fact that policy revelant to reporting will differ in accordance with the philosophy of the various agency heads.

LIMITATIONS

1. All police departments are not equipped to render complete and accurate accounting of offenses committed and persons charged because of limited manpower, funding, etc.

2. Difference in the collecting and interpreting crime date.

3. Some police jurisdictions overlap.

4. Some juveniles are informally handled which affects the accuracy of the juvenile report input.

5. Crimes against persons and their property are not always reported to police.

6. Crime clearances lag months and sometimes years behind the actual reported offenses.

7. Property illustrations reflect the property stolen and/or recovered. Property damage is not included.

8. Stolen property figures represent property stolen during the reporting year. Recovered property figures may reflect reported property stolen in a previous calendar year but recovered in the reporting year.

CONCLUSION

The release of crime statistics frequently results in a controversy as to the accuracy of the statistics and how these statistics should be interpreted. Listed within this publication are many of the major assumptions and limitations which make it very apparent that great caution should be used when referring to the statistical data in this publication. The recognition of the assumptions and limitations should help the reader of this statistical resource to focus attention on valid objects, thus minimizing the dangers of over-generalization.

VALUE OF PROPERTY STOLEN AND RECOVERED FOR INDEX OFFENSES

The next two charts will deal with value of property stolen and recovered by article and month, as well as property stolen by crime and month.

The article or type of property stolen is of great importance to the police administrator when he attempts to develop programs to prevent the theft of any particular article.

This is an attempt to list articles stolen by month and, also, to reveal the value of property involved in the seven Part 1 crimes.

A juvenile is counted as a person arrested when he commits an offense and the circumstances are such that if the offender were an adult an arrest would be made.
